Short bio: I am originally from Mumbai, India and moved to Canada to pursue my Masters in Biotechnology at McGill University. I am now a PhD student at McGill and am interested in studying age related changes in the musculoskeletal system. I also study the signalling events associated with bone adaption and have an interest in purinergic signalling. Besides academia, I enjoy music and play the piano and ukulele.

What do you expect from this training?

I am looking forward to listening to new and exciting research from distinguished scientists and researchers around the world. I am aiming to enhance my knowledge in the field of musculoskeletal research.

Bonus question: What motivates you to get out of bed in the morning?

The fact that I have a new day ahead of me to achieve my goals and get my work done motivates me to get out of bed in the morning,
