Short bio:

Born on the 25th of June 1992. Had a happy childhood growing up with my older sister, brother and parents. Family still has an important role in my life.
I've started my medical studies in 2010. After graduation, I decided to start my training in internal medicine to become an endocrinologist. I've worked 2 years in the hospital as trainee and started my PhD in August 2019 at the KU Leuven.
I like to go for a run and play tennis. I also enjoy watching a good movie and like to cook.

What do you expect from this training?

Meeting new people
Interesting discussions about bone and calcifications
Sharing experiences
Discovering new techniques and acquiring new insights in own research project

Bonus question: What motivates you to get out of bed in the morning?

Definitely coffee
